SHOT DEAD FIERCE LAWRENCE IN FIGHT

LAWRENCE, Jan. 23.—Philip Koury, a Syrian, fatally wounded Karan Behandony, a Syrian, and shot Policeman Walter A. Chandler in the hand early to-day.

Then Koury barricaded himself in the building at the corner of Pine and Elm streets.

The police, aided by militia, stormed the place and shot the man dead through the door of the building. The door and the body of the man behind it were riddled with lead.

He went here because five minutes before the squad entered the room where he was hidden.

Efforts to induce him to surrender, to make him get out and to drive him down with ladders having failed, and knowing that he would carry out his threats, to kill all his place was entered, the police decided to use the rifle.

Private William Madison and Frank Trelford of Company F of the Ninth Regiment, State Armory John P. Ryan, Jr., Thomas J. Brown, Arthur J. Jones of Battery C and several policemen, armed with rifles went to the building at the corner of Pine and Elm streets. They kept up a continual bombardment for fifteen minutes. Several hundred shots were poured into the man's refuge. At last he was killed, being shot eight or ten times, and then he stopped.

Find Body Shot to Pieces.

After it was certain that nothing could be done in the face of that fire a ladder was run up on the outside and Policeman William Madison volunteered to go up. With his revolver in hand he went up cautiously, he peeked in, but saw no trace of Koury, who was in the adjoining room.

Madison then went back to the main entrance and found the door open. He went in and found the body of the man who had been shot dead lying on the floor. He was lying on his back, his head and arms were broken and his body was all over blood. He was lying in front of a fireplace. Madison went to the body and found that he had been killed. It was a tragedy.

After some daylight, when a group of eight or ten young Syrians were standing in front of the building, a man in a dark coat and white shirt, who was identified as Koury, appeared from around the corner.

He came out at first as if he were surprised, but then he stepped forward and began to speak. He said that he was not Koury, but that he was a man who had been shot dead. He said that he was a man who had been shot dead.

Empty Pistol into Crowd.

"Get back, get back, you are being shot," he roared, holding a 44-caliber revolver in each hand. Before the men could run he began to pump the gun into the crowd. His aim was steady, but one bullet hit Behandony in the shoulder and another in the chest. He dropped.

After he had apparently emptied his revolver, Koury, with a merrily cry of "You are shot, I'm going to kill you," walked away.

Two hours later he appeared near the scene where and a crowd which surrounded him told one of the many police who were there that he was Koury. He was walking away from the building where he was shot.

He ran to the left on the second story, and then he came back to the first floor. He was walking away from the building where he was shot.

He was walking away from the building where he was shot. He was walking away from the building where he was shot.

Steamship Republic Is Run Down Off Nantucket by Unidentified Vessel—Thrilling Rescues—Liner Reported in Sinking Condition.

The swift White Star liner, the Republic, which sailed for Genoa from New York yesterday, was rammed by an unidentified vessel off Nantucket Shoals before daylight to-day in a dense fog, is reported in a wireless message to the Maritime Exchange of New York to be sinking.

The more than 400 passengers were taken off by vessels that were picked up by wireless and hurried to the scene of the accident. The identity and fate of the vessel that collided with the Republic are not known.

Because of the extent of the injury done to the Republic it is thought that the colliding vessel must have been a large one and that it must have been injured and perhaps lost.

According to another wireless message received by the New York Maritime Exchange, late this afternoon, all of the passengers and most of the crew of the Republic were taken off by the Florida of the Italian line and are en route for New York. The Florida was in its way from Genoa to New York and was picked up by the distressed steamer by wireless.

With its passengers safely aboard the Florida and with the Republic in a sinking condition, the Florida was actually notified, Captain Sealby is reported to be standing by the vessel in a sinking condition, standing by the vessel in a sinking condition.

It Rolls DOWN Hill Easily—Hard to Roll It UP AGAIN

Copyright 1993 by American Journal Examiner

Put your mind on these two pictures for one day.

First, how easily borrowed money rolls along, getting smaller and smaller as it rolls! Great fun rolling it while it lasts! It slips along so easily, and life seems quite a simple problem.

But—

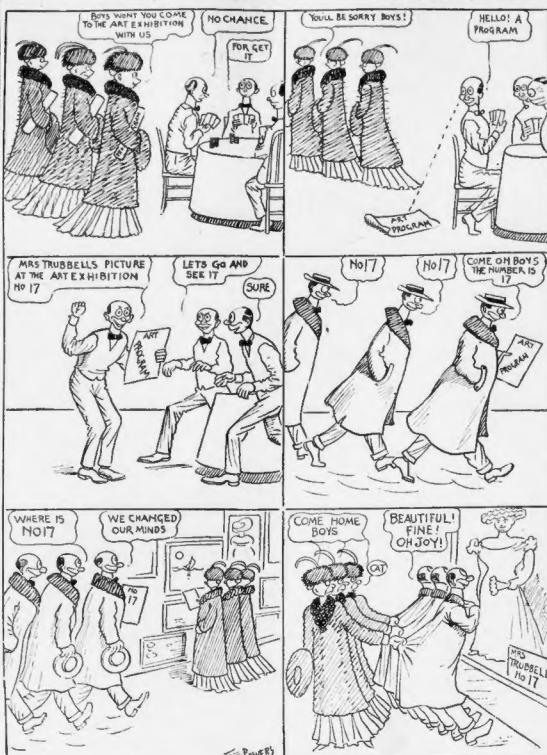

Rolling the borrowed money up hill again is a very different story. It's painful, slow, you remember distinctly every tiresome step in the journey.

A good many of us can study these pictures with profit. Very few in their lives have escaped this uphill pushing.

Loan sharks are vile, and decent government would suppress them.
Loose credits are harmful, and might well be controlled by law.

But each one, if he will, can STEAL THIS LOAN SHARK QUESTION FOR HIMSELF. Don't roll the borrowed money down hill—then you won't have to push it slowly up hill again. Spend only 89 cents of every dollar, and you will walk along on the level, no momentary down hill excitement, no slow, painful up hill pushing—and you'll be happier and more useful in the end. DON'T BORROW.

Heaven Is Built of Our Thoughts, and if These Are Narrow
Our Edifices in That Other Country Will Be Small

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

N Intelligent woman, who reads all | Joyment in which are advantageous; and

A the New Thought literature extant, expressed surprise when a friend, who had been travelling in China, spoke of the intellectuality of the men and the beauty of many of the women.

"Who, I always supposed they were half-civilized heathens," she said, and eventually might as well look at the novel as any handsome or intellectual Chinese here."

It would help this good woman to a larger understanding of the world to read Confucius and Tao philosophy.

And she would also read, I suspect

"To find enjoyment, in silence and seclusion, in the exercises of fasting, in abstinent pleasures, these are idle-acts."

Confucius believed in morality and in the moral life, as is seen by his constant references to Heaven, to goodness, and appearances are but trivial things; the constant

Supreme Heaven have neither sound nor smell. That is perfect virtue."

Due to Narrowness

This great man died, aged seventy years, 479 years B. C. His disciples told marvellous tales of his divine birth, and of the miraculous forerunners of his coming to earth. Yet during his life he was a weak, feeble, timid person, who, impelled and driven to despair, all because he desired to reform the people and lead them into the attainment of "perfect virtue," was crucified.

Teachings of Confucius

The Books of Confucius are classics to-day in the Chinese language, and have been translated into nearly all, if not all, languages. Among his sayings is this one in the Analects 15-22, "What you do should be done to yourself, do not do to others."

More than five hundred years later, who so practical virtue, even if unworthy of the effect, will find his Heaven waiting for him when he goes out of this sphere? For Heaven is builded of our thoughts, and we are the pillars that support it and in the edifice. The spiritual strength of the individual is the strength of the race and more tolerant your thoughts, the bigger your edifice will be when you pass on to that Other Country.

More than five hundred years later Christ made this saying more potent and beautiful by changing it to:
"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."
 One is negative goodness, the other

The Power of Influence

"Let every household be rightly ordered. Then the people may be rightly taught. When the sovereign behaves to the aged as the aged should be helped, to assist people become illal; when the sovereign treats compassionately the young and helpless, the people do the same; when a ruler loves what the people love, the people hates what they hate, then he is parent of the people.

"The superior man is anxious lest he should be untrue; he is not anxious lest poverty come upon him. When men die, the Chinese."

father thought, "our child is a good man, a high type of purely American child, and lead them to talk on this subject, and you will be astonished at the intellectual ignorance regarding the right of the colored people to the vote, and the spiritual consideration."

"I am glad to hear of your favorable views on American education. Teach your children tolerance as you command the necessary courage to command the necessary courage."
